12 Amazing Glamping Adventures That Will Make You Forget All About Your Favorite Hotel

You won't miss a thing in these all-out luxurious tents from Canada to Cambodia.

BY GRAEME GREEN ON APRIL 23, 2019

There's no feeling quite like warming by a roaring campfire out in the wilderness, beneath the stars. In our busy, modern, tech-heavy lives, getting back to nature feels more and more important. Whether it's by lakes or rivers, high up in towering mountains or on wildlife-filled grasslands, spending time in the great outdoors is a way to feel reinvigorated, a time to switch off phones and laptops, to breathe fresh air and enjoy stillness and peace.

But the days when camping meant scrimping on style and comfort are long gone. Glamping stepped in, offering the same away-from-it-all feel, only with comfortable beds, en-suite bathrooms, heating, lighting and even antique furniture and local art, not to mention gourmet meals, cocktails and fine wines, plus swimming pools, gyms and spas.

Singita Mara River Tented Camp

Serengeti Game Reserve, Tanzania

Set in the 99,000-acre Singita Lamai private concession at the northern tip of Tanzania's Serengeti National Park, Singita Mara River Tented Camp has a prized position on a bend in the Mara River, with the Serengeti to the south and Kenya's Masai Mara to the north, a great spot for watching the wildebeest crossings during the great migration. The camp operates entirely on solar energy, with safari tents given a modern East African design by award-winning South African interior designer Cécile & Boyd, with natural fabrics, bright Masai colors and African arts and crafts. As well as watching the local wildlife, there are bespoke wine tastings with the camp's sommelier.
